STUDENTS

The attempt of this yearbook is to give the reader a brief overview of the environment that confronts the student body of Boston State. To depict the character of the student body, we will look to it as a student body with three unique faces. The terms used must be realized to be relative. There are radicals. They confront the administration to evoke change. Often the extent to which the change must go is over-exaggerated and the methods of causing that change are extreme. The goal of that change must be constantly re-evaluated, for only through a re-evaluation will it be a positive change that occurs. Opposing this element are the conservatives. Many accept the present situation without question. They find refuge in status-quo.

Some oppose not the change sought, but those who seek that change. Lying between these forces is the third face. The liberals. They see a need for change. They also see that the method of that change is also relevant to the change. Mishandled leadership of many of State's past hassels has caused them to be wary. And there are those who are without a face or a commitment, the fence-sitting apathetics. To them school is where you go to get a diploma so you can go out and teach, make money, get married, and raise a family. The "I don't give a damn" attitude is what may kill State; not the strikes, or the bomb scares.

COMMUTING

Good morning! Or is it? When you waken to the sound of WBZ's Skyway Patrol telling you that traffic is backed up right to your front door. It's hard to rise and shine when you must enter a bumper-to-bumper roller coaster ride that will never let you shift into fourth, never mind, engage that new super-charger you put in over the week-end. Once at school you search for those non-existent parking spaces that were rumored to be close to State. The ones that cost $10.00. Meanwhile, let us not forget that courageous, determined, but somewhat wearied pilgrim, the subway commuter. While waiting to be swallowed by the great metal snake which will eat its way through the city, he contemplates his fate, to be cramped, crowded, and pulverized in his attempts to reach his destination. His only relief is in knowing that at Longwood he will be ejected from the creature and be allowed to go to the cafe and get that one cup of coffee and confidence which at last now he needs and most justifiably deserves.

APARTMENTS

An alternative to fighting the traffic and the MBTA, for those who can afford them, are apartments. An existence of agony and ecstasy. For a few hundred dollars a month you and your roommates share the expenses and deteriorate a three room flat that you will grow to love and affectionately call "home". Responsibilities, though, are as plentiful as the new freedoms. Own cooking, laundering, demanding landlords, in town store prices, and bills, bills, and more bills. Yes, new hassels, not the old parental ones, but still there are hassels. But, for some reason it's fun to decide whether or not to buy a loaf of bread, or diet and splurge on the box of East Indian incense you've promised yourself. All in all, for one in college, it's the life fit for a king, that is, as long as you are able to maintain your student prince status, for you tend to study less and enjoy it more.

RELAXATION

To some students relaxation comes, paradoxically, in being constantly involved in something. Be it politics, publications, hallway debates, a walk in the fens, or a work-out in the gym, each student finds his own way to relax and steals the time to do it.

STUDY

Study is a lonely thing. It is cramming fifteen weeks of learning into one night or a fifty page research paper into two days. There are students who study regularly, but they are a slim minority. And there are those who study minimally, for study is also painful.

It is probing through dim issues and attempting to understand. And in the end, all that is understood is that the end of the problem is not in sight. Study, like learning, is similar to crawling out of a funnel. The questions increase and the answers are more difficult to find.

LOVE

Two people come together. They wander through the classes and causers which fill the school year. They sit in the fens in the spring and throw snowballs in the winter. They do many of the prosaic things which are expected of people in love. If they are lucky, they grow out of the prosaic together. They share. They grow. They become flexible in and about each other's feelings. They learn to be independent of one another without endangering their mutual dependence. Now, as we stand on the brink of our future, we gaze upon the world with one set of eyes.

PROTEST

Since we were born men have conspired to fashion a time called peaceful. Their time of peace has been characterized by: Vietnam, Laos, Chicago, Detroit, Nigeria, Berlin, Crete, Lebanon, Israel, Syria, Suez, Angola, Nepal, Cuba, Newark, Korea, Solna, Cyprus, Dallas, Londonderry, Czechoslovakia. Our history has been written in terms of battles—their strategies, their results, their heroes, their victims. Man has wasted his Man-ness on schemes based on greed and self-esteem. The resulting balance of terror has raped a once beautiful world. Now men have grown tired of their insane behavior. People clamor for an end to a war. The liberals weep for peace. The conservatives rage for it. Protesting—students have incurred the wrath of the “older and wiser” generation. The protesters are called Unshaven, Communist, Irreligious, Dirty. Just what has that got to do with the protest? The silence of everyone else has not accomplished anything anywhere. Complacency towards an acknowledged wrong is not a fitting response from the human spirit.

BLACKS

Year after year the probability of a real increase of a Black student population has been promised, but never realized. Two programs of recruitment were implemented since 1966, but lack of commitment forced their failure. After much time and effort a Black Studies Program now exists, though it is only an inner discipline of the History Department. The program is inadequate. More is needed. To be Black at Boston State means to be angry. Angry at an institution whose administration, faculty, and student body, on the most part, bear only lip service to the cause of civil liberty. Angry at the educated Int who have overlooked your human rights. And angry at yourself for accepting a sometimes half-baked loaf of bread, accepting less than what is needed by you, your people, and mankind.

ENVIRONMENT

This gentle earth which brought us bright mornings and brilliant nights is now dark and grey with our careless waste. Waste which has been expelled by animate and inanimate objects alike. We step from our homes into an arena of convulsive pollutant foes, who pierce our lungs and sting our eyes. All are responsible. Everyone is to blame. The trash which has no distinguishable characteristics reflects the character of the people. It is the people, you and I, who must begin to care. Let us begin now to restore the mornings of brightness and fresh air. Perhaps in our time the changing seasons will again reflect colors other than grey.

BOSTON

EVENTS 1970-71

The Student Government-sponsored events for the 1970-71 academic year were, on the whole, well-organized and run. Trying to accommodate for the many varying interests, Student Government booked a gamut of entertainment—from the big band sound of Glenn Miller to the quiet strains of the folk artist Tom Rush. For comic relief we were treated to Mort Sahl and the presence of the Irish Rovers. Possibly, 1970-71 was not a star-studded spectacular to other colleges, but at State, we were lucky. We might have gotten "Dicky Do and the Don't" supported by the "Cufflinks".

WALDEN, WISCONSIN

A striking man, both in speech and personality, Mort Sahl had his audience at attention. As a political satirist, he was tops. As a social psychologist, he was amazing. With a biting tongue, he commented on the times, past, present, and future. His pokes at the establishment were well taken; aimed at its soft spots. He made his listeners aware of such atrocities and misconceptions as the Warren Report, the Jack Ruby Trial, and the incarceration of James Earl Ray. Although his reports were quite humorous, they were also shocking. Unfortunately, he and his audience were forced to evacuate the building and move to the courtyard due to an unexpected bomb scare. Mort Sahl's presence at State was most entertaining, but also most informative.

The man from Edgartown arrived on time though his sound equipment didn't. His bass guitarist got sick and his audience waited and waited. Through the crowd he sauntered up to his platform and with a smile and some tremendous songs captured the favor of three thousand people. Tom Rush is a twentieth century minstrel. He sings songs about the land and earthlings. Songs of love and the beauty of nature float from his guitar. It is pleasant to hear a folksinger who remained a folksinger and didn't get lost in acid rock. His rendition of Joanie Mitchell's "The Urge For Going" was an especially beautiful poetic song, tastefully done. Those who persevered through the technical difficulties were truly rewarded.

Music that once filled the pubs of the "Emerald Isle" flowed freely from the five lads known as the Irish Rovers. The crowd, about four hundred and fifty strong, was treated to a songfeasted evening.

Bawdy and racaus ballads were the order. The songs performed sent that compulsion to grab a wench and a flask of ale and join in the singing.

The knee-slapping music and laughable lyrics extended the comradery of the Rovers to the audience, until all were bound up in the laughter, cheering, clapping, and happiness. This event, for those who attended it, brought an old-fashioned good time.

The Xmas party held in the new North Lounge was, to say the least, a bad scene. Many saw a brief, but excellent performance by the artist Jamie Brockett. Due to swarming hordes of beer freaks all those, including Jamie, who wanted to get into the music found it difficult to contend with the show being put on in the back of the hall by these people. With the show over prematurely, the scene was set for the next disaster—the Annual Winter Ball. Approximately only three hundred of the student body turned out to see Glenn Miller's Band, which treated the audience to many of its famous hits. Unfortunately, most of which were too old for this young audience to actually remember. Also on the bill, as a rock interest, was the Park Street Under. The evening was enjoyable—from the corn to the bubble-gum.

Audiences are seldom crowded at Boston State entertainment events, but such was not the case at the Four Tops concert held at the Music Hall. Many students attended and were glad they did, for the show put on by the "Tops" was, indeed, a spectacular one.

A most promising sign on the entertainment horizon was this year's Boston State Speaker Series. Covering a wide variety of student interests, Student Government booked several controversial figures. Those booked to speak included the birth control advocate William Baird, the talented comedian and social critic Dick Gregory, the author of the Naked Ape Desmond Morris, and Russ Burgess, a remarkable ESP man. A special thanks is in order to Student Government for supplying a most entertaining and enlightening Speaker Series.

This year's Drama Club and Shakespearean Society offered a wide variety of theater pieces for the enjoyment of the Boston State student body. A well-rounded season, in terms of emotion, was presented. We had laughter supplied by the play "Dick and Jane." We had tears brought to our eyes by Dianey's "A Taste of Honey." Special treats were a fine presentation of the death scene from Peter Weiss's "Marat-Sade" and the production of Shakespeare's "All's Well That Ends Well." A special children's workshop and a potpourri ended the season. As usual, all of the pieces presented by these two groups reflected their talent as actors, directors, and stage personnel.

SPORTS

Boston State fields eleven varsity and two freshman teams and has a vast intramural program. A Student-Government sponsored club football team, coached by the former Boston Patriot, Art Graham, played an intercollegiate schedule in the fall of 1970 and was enthusiastically supported; it will be considered for future varsity status. The success of Boston State's teams and individuals against top-caliber competition testifies to the quality of it's coaching staff.

Facing many formidable opponents, our varsity lacrosse team has proven to possess as much brain as brawn. With all team members acting in unison, this relatively new sport at State has developed into a club with planned offensive and defensive maneuvers. This is a great tribute to the team and to the coach. In competing with larger and stronger schools, our athletes have given their all and, thus, acquired a record well worth our praise.

Boston State boasts an extensive intramural program. Intramural activities include: touch football, basketball, badminton, volleyball, boxing, golf, and tennis. For the individual competitor there are many tournaments in which he may prove his skill. Such tournaments include: handball, squash, and table tennis. An asset to State, as it helps to sharpen existing varsity athletes and promote new ones, the intramural program deserves mention and acclaim.

The newest of Boston State's athletic teams is the Football Club. Comprised of members of the undergraduate student body, this team fostered an impressive first season record. With tough competition to face, our team fared well. Ending the season with a 8-1 record these Warriors and their fans may justifiably be proud.

The 1970-71 Boston State College Indoor Track team will be just like their uniforms, according to Coach Bill Squires—green and gold. "We'll be golden in the running events," said Squires, "and green in the field events. What success we can have this season will depend on how quickly some of our green kids can come along. I'll say this, though—they're ripe with potential." Squires expects Boston State will get its toughest tests against Coast Guard, Tufts, Dartmouth and Boston University this season, with the special teams participating in the New Englands, NAIA Nationals, BAA and ICAA Championships.

The 1970-71 Boston State College basketball team has undergone a change as radical as a Volkswagon with tail fins. Unlike past Warrior Wagons, this year's model has plenty of leg room. "This is the biggest team I've ever had," said Coach Jim Luscutt. "We've still got some guys that can run, and now we've got some guys that can clear the boards. In fact, we've got more experienced forwards than guards, and that's rare." The Wagon's roughest going has been from the territory inhabited by NESCAC rival Rhode Island College, Northeast League powers Southern Connecticut and Stonehill, and independents Bently and Merrimack.

Some new ingredients might make the difference in a winning recipe for the Boston State hockey team. "Something was missing last year," reflected Coach Ed Barry. "We lost so many of those one and two-goal games. We got our share of goals, but not when we needed them. This season, we're trying some new combinations, and maybe we'll be a little more consistent." Boston State faces the cream of the Division II crop again, including champion Vermont, runner-up Bowdoin, and the perennial power Merrimack.

The baseball team at Boston State operates under, somewhat of, a handicap. With the college lacking an adequate playing field, the team is forced to use the Fenway area as a practice field, which is also used by both Latin and English High Schools. This creates problems in both accessibility and in wear-and-tear. But, even under these hardships, the Boston State baseball team has proven themselves to be a fine combination of athletes.

The Boston State sailing team, in each of their races, faces a two-fold competition; team against team and man against nature. A tough and demanding sport, sailing offers each team member a rare chance to test his worth against those of other individuals and against the power and might of the elements of nature. Many of the crews have taken to sailing because of this unique challenge. And to add, they have fared well.

In what must rate as one of the most successful first seasons in college sports, Boston State's gymnastics team won four of its last five matches to post a winning 6-5 regular season record and placed third in the New England championship. This was done with an almost all-freshman team. This year, the team faces teams like M.I.T., Dartmouth, Cornell and Southern Connecticut, all solid gymnastic schools. Coach Joe Dorsey feels that with a year of experience behind them, last year's freshmen have contributed to make a stronger squad overall.

While Boston State's wrestlers are trying to make trainer Al Roncarati's scale balance within their respective weight classes, coach Arnie Shaw is trying to balance his wrestling talent. "We have the same problem we faced last year," said Arnie. "We've got good talent concentrated in a few classes, but we're thin in the others. Boston State will get good tussels from NESCAC rivals Rhode Island College and Plymouth, and the city rivals Boston University and Boston College.

Overcoming mid-season match cancellations, Coach Joe Savignano's Rifle team is in the process of developing its freshman members. A high point of the season was the selection of Captain Ralph McHugh as a National Outstanding Athlete of America in riflery.

Dr. Barry Colt's Pistol team competes against tough competition. Among the Intercollegiate Pistol League are teams of Annapolis, West Point, Air Force Academy, M.I.T., and the Coast Guard. This team is Boston State's only team to number two girls among its varsity letter winners.

The sidelines of a hockey, football, or basketball game are no less exhausting than the playing field if one watches the relentless and energetic pursuit of the Boston State cheerleaders to cheer onto victory the men who wear State's green and gold.

These girls give their all to booster team confidence and crowd participation. A contributing force to State's athletic teams, as attested to by many an athlete, they rightfully must be included in one's mention of the sport's scene at State. So, to all the Boston State cheerleaders—a last hurrah.

Recent perpetrations such as bomb "scare" and muggings, and general campus discontent has thrown the college into a state of darkness. Uneasiness due to fear of these being repeated, should cause administration and student leaders to quell these irrational acts. Campus police must be given greater power in order to combat these attacks. Student leaders must stress the dangers, physically and mentally, to all members of the college community. We must all realize that the retarded effect upon our education can never be altered sufficiently to produce a net gain in learning. Finally, student and community leaders must eliminate the alleged acceptance of such bizarre deeds, and insure full protection to all.

It was pointed out to me the other day that the Metropolitan District Commission allow legal parking around the Fens during every Boston Red Sox Home Game. More specifically, Red Sox fans are allowed 80 days of the year to park their cars where BSC students cannot park any day of the year!!! Baseball is a private industry and the M.D.C. allows parking for them. Boston State College is run by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, like the Metropolitan District Commission and they will not let BSC students park around the Fens. WHY? I am going to personally speak with John Sears, Chairman of the M.D.C.

next week. Brian Leahy will accompany me and maybe (hopefully) we can get some results.

The members of "F Troop" of Kennedy Lounge hereby challenge the Chalkdust Staff to a match of floor hockey in Gym C anytime mutual schedules permit after March 1.

I see that so few students bought tickets to see the Four Tops perform at the Music Hall on February 4 that the SGA was compelled to give them out for free. I think the tickets should have been given out free in the first place. Why do we pay $25 a year for Student Activity Fees and be forced to pay again for an activity? That's not logical to me, anyway.

Boston Youth faces Draft Card Challenge

BOSTON, (AP) — A 22 year old Boston man slated for an appearance in U.S. District Court on a draft card charge today took sanctuary instead at the Paulist Fathers Roman Catholic chapel on Park Street.

Judge Charles E. Wyzanski Jr. in federal court ordered the U.S. marshal to pick up Paul B. Coumings for the court appearance but to be careful to avoid violence.

A spokesman at the chapel indicated that Coumings would not be expelled from the building. Coumings was slated for court action on a charge of failing to carry his draft card.

He earlier had claimed conscientious objector status, and had been ordered to report for work at Boston City Hospital in lieu of military duty. The hospital reported he failed to show up for work.

JOBS FOR ESL ENGLISH TEACHERS

This year as last, when teaching positions are scarce, majors in Elementary Education, English and Foreign Languages are reminded of the opportunities in English as a Second Language (ESL). Most Urban and suburban communities of the State have the problem of educating non-English speakers. Boston State has been offering methodology courses in its Day Undergraduate Program, in Continuing Studies and last summer conducted an intensive teacher-training Institute. The students in these various programs, have been very successful in finding positions and it is a fact that there will be positions in this field in September.

During the Spring the Department of Languages will be FL-210 Methods of ESL, with opportunity for observation and student teaching in the Public Schools. English should note that they may be counted toward English major.

Submitted by Dr. W. Newman, Dept. of Languages.

The campus of Boston State College has been beset by voices of conjecture, by wanton rumors, and by unjustifiable attacks. Keeping this in mind, my purpose in writing the article, "S.G.A. and S.D.S. Clash" was to verbally demonstrate the type of unsubstantiated slander permeating the walls of this academic community. In essence, my article was guilty of planned provocation. My original plan was to carry on

LABOR DEPT. TELLS PROSPECTIVE TEACHERS TO RECONSIDER

Washington-(A)- The Labor Department says young people, especially women, planning on becoming teachers in the 1970's should think instead about other jobs and fields. In a once-in-a-decade forecast, the department noted the dwindling demand in education, a field entered by two out of three women college graduates in the past, and warned those who pursue that aim could wind up in unemployment lines.

But the report said state and local governments will offer 52 percent more jobs by 1980: services and profession, 40 percent more; construction 35 percent; finance, insurances and real estate 24 percent; trade 23 percent; manufacturing, 11 percent, and transportation, communication and public utilities and the federal government, 10 percent each.

Mining jobs will fall nine percent and agriculture 23 percent.

The document said that the elementary and secondary school teacher job decline will bottom out by 1973.

A REPORT ON EDDIE

Boston State's Foster Child

BY MARK SHINNEY U.S.B.

Last month, Carroll Parker, a field worker for "Save the Children Federation", visited Eddie Hamblin, Boston State's foster child. Eddie is a nine year old boy living in Appalachia. Last fall the Volunteer Service Bureau raised the money to sponsor Eddie.

This week we received a report on how the Hamblin family has been helped by Boston State's support. The following paragraph is from a letter from the Appalachian Field Office.

"I visited Eddie and his family in October and they are doing very well with their family self-help project. Mr. Hamblin used the money from your sponsorship as well as the money from the sponsorships of his other children to purchase a saw mill. Mr. Hamblin was very proud and quite optimistic of the success of his project so far.

This time last year provide very little for himself, working at home earning approximately $1,000 annually as a direct result. From his point of view, he has made a successful project. I know his have been a great deal him and they share satisfaction with sawmill. We appreciate support in helping them help themselves recommend that you your sponsorship for year."

The Volunteer Bureau he hopes to complete this program. We hope student body will agree to raise the needed money.

OUR NEW BUILDING

The new Ipswich St. building has been the subject of discussion on this campus. Primarily, the controversy revolved around the inconveniences involved in traffic back and forth to classes. This we feel, is something that eventually be worked out.

The bus service is a great idea and actually a surprise to students. Few have had confidence in this school's handling problems, but this seems to be an exception.

The building itself is a welcome sight for eyes weary of the dreariness of classes in Collins Building. Even brightly painted and equipped with excellent light, cafeteria is large and clean. The library will be a great asset to those with most of their classes at Ipswich St.

The only criticism of the building which we have heard of windows in some of the middle rooms. The air circulate poorly there and, as everyone knows, circulation and a boring class, call for sleeping students.

We welcome the addition to our school and hope all acquisitions are handled as well.

WHY "THE IRISH ROVERS"

The selection of the "Irish Rovers" Irish Folk Singers to appear in concert at Boston State College poses questions to the majority of the students at Boston State.

Surely, this group meets professional standards, but they qualify in terms of appeal to the majority.

Large sums of money will be expended this year, to bring top name entertainment to the college, for entertainment pleasure of all the students.

In this age of Led Zeppelin, Credence Clearwater, The Stones and a host of others, how can the Student Council Association sincerely feel that they are on the cutting edge, presenting a varied and popular entertainment program for the selection of the Irish Rovers the first time around?

Trustees er Burdened

Massachusetts State system is composed of State Colleges with an endowment of over 100,000. Under the Willis Act, the State Board of Trustees meet twelve times a year for four hours. In this forty-eight hours a Board of Trustees over a hundred million of educational funds and makes affecting the lives and of over 100,000 enrolled in the State system. There is radically wrong when the burden of educating of our nation is so dropped on the of twelve citizens of this.

Board of Trustees this an opportunity to rid of this great burden. Massachusetts Legislature several bills which call establishment of a Board of Trustees for State College. In the past have been filled many this year the Board of in a better position for the change. There facts we should make clear. Members of the Board of Trustees are not salaried. The Board members are dedicated to improving and increasing the quality and quantity of higher education in Massachusetts. The Board of Trustees learn from their mistakes. The Board of Trustees want a well organized limited bendache system of educating the young men and women of Massachusetts. The members of the Board of Trustees would like to be referred to as the pacesetters of higher education in Massachusetts not the road blockers as it appears they are now considered to be.

The Trustee's should consider the feasibility of separate Boards for some of the State Colleges. They can substantiate themselves by citing the trends throughout the U.S. In 27 states which had one Board of Trustees for the entire State College System, the governing of the higher education institutions has been changed to individual Boards of Trustees for each college.

Conversion to a new system could cut down on education headaches and certainly the time is right. NOW.

Students Interfere With Teachers' Academic Freedom

BY William Fitzpatrick

It is most difficult to define the bounds of academic freedom. In a sense, today's questioning students are not allowing teachers to "have their way." To what extent may a student direct the learning in a particular class.

Lecturing is a poor method of teaching. This medieval practice was appropriate in an era of paucity of printed, and other visual and audio presentations. Today's classroom must be for discussions, encounters, and laboratory practices. The "now" teacher is primarily a director of learning, a psychologist, and sociologist, who is not the repository of "all" learning in his discipline.

Since students are necessarily a part of the

After spending most of our lives sitting in freezing MBTA buses, trolleys, or elevator trains, one hardly understands the proposed cutback of "T" service in the Boston area.

There are two alarming aspects of the move. (1) As taxpayers and primary users and suppliers of MBTA services community leaders or persons were never consulted before recommending such a move. (2) The proposed complete elimination of some lines such as the Rte 128 service for black workers, and those lines in the lower income areas of the city are shocking and impossible for

The New York Times of February 2, 1971 in an article by Admiral F. G. The routine management of this technology is difficult enough. Far more difficult is the crucially important task of using new ways to bring modern technology into harmony with nature." What else would expected Richover to say. There is no denying, however, the facts as quoted by Toifler in his currently selling book, FUTURE: SHOCK.

Board of Trustees

The SGA has been fighting for a separate Board of Trustees for Boston State for three years now. I think our own Board is desperately needed at this point. A case in point:

O n December 10 the Board of Trustees officially dropped the summer trimester from the schedule of courses of Boston State. This had been under consideration for many months, but the Board of Trustees did not officially decide until December 10.

T h e following has been proposed by members of the Boston State campus:

That there be two six-week summer courses starting June 1 to July 9 (first six week session) and July 12 to August 20 (second six-week session.) The two six-week summer sessions would be given by the Program of Continuing Studies and the cost would be $10 a credit per course. A student would be allowed to take two courses per six-week session but may get special permission to take three courses if his situation warrants this. Each course would be one hour and fifteen minutes long. There would be no student fees, only the $10 per credit per course, the registration fee, and possible lab fee.

Before this proposed plan can be accepted, it must be approved by the subcommittee of the Board of Trustees, the entire committee of the Board of Trustees, the Commissioner of Administration and Finance, and the Chairman of House, Ways, and Means for finances to run the program.

Even though the summer courses are of crucial importance to many students at State, the Board of Trustees has not given any decision on this matter. As a matter of fact, it is not known if they have even considered the proposal as of yet. Needless to say, any decision is not expected for some time.

I t never ceases to amaze me that even though Boston State has the largest student population and offers one of the most varied programs, we receive the least amount of money, the least amount of cooperation from the Board, and the smallest amount of concern from the Board of Trustees.

STUDENT POWER

I would also like to suggest that SGA set up some sort of a system such as Northeastern University uses for its game room. N.U. has a work-study student in charge of the room. If a student wants to use the ping-pong tables or wants to use a deck of cards, or wants to use the pool tables, he must reserve the hour that he wishes to use the table and when he comes to claim the hour, he must turn in an ID card before being allowed to use the facilities. This would also make students liable for broken cue sticks, lost balls and damage to tables. It would also prevent students from the local high schools from spending some time there at the expense of the students of Boston State College.

I would also suggest to SGA and students alike that North Hall not be turned into an annex lunchroom and be used only as a lounge.

The North Hall should be open for use by Monday, but only if the Student Government Association gives the go ahead. If any students or faculty have any suggestion about the way the hall is to be used or about the hours that it is open or about the suggestion I made about a work study student to be placed in the hall, I would suggest that you contact the SGA.

Junk the Candy Machines

By Ed Stack

I write this article after having just gotten gyped by the candy machine in the second floor
lounge at the Fenway Building.
This may seem a little matter;
but everyday those machines
take advantage of hungry
students who desire a candy bar.

The next time you buy a bar,
take a look at the size of the ten cent bars. When you open up your bar you will find to your dismay a five cent piece of candy.

If this is the way that candy
companies want to do business;
then we can do without them.
This exploitation cannot continue. Students should get their money's worth; and no less.

Perhaps, instead of candy machines, we should replace them with tonic machines.
Perhaps, we should have no machines at all, if students are going to be used by them.

EDITORIAL

Campus turmoil has not created a perfect environment for student, faculty and administrative discussions and the establishment of a "freer university." However, the Chalkdust Editorial Staff positively supports the actions of the Administration in alleviating student fears and rumors. The Chalkdust recognizes the Administrative efforts to dispel apprehensions by noting that as long as Dr. McCarthy is President of this college, the college will continue to operate and function "in as nearly a normal manner as conditions will permit."

By Bill Webber, Editor Bi-Weekly

The recent disclosures by S.G.A. on discrepancies in book funds, precludes administration action. The important financial management to a "non-profit" organization necessary and indeed a minimal component of any business.
Therefore Chalkdust suggests, we, the students, and Student Government, retain a lawyer to investigate the quagmire which has developed over such discrepancies organization and charter. Successive bureaucratic bungling abhorred and only a complete investigation in court, corporation, will solve the dilemma. Chalkdust requests Administration to detect such mismanagement, and necessary dissolve such a corporation.

FOOTBALL AT BOSTON STATE -A REALITY-

by Dave Roberts

Football is a reality at Boston
State and if anyone has any doubts just contact the Fairfield University Football Team.

After beating a team like Fairfield which has had varsity level football for six years, State has shown the ability to field a competent team. The game was significant in other ways in that it reflects potential for the future and it shows what a coach and dedicated players can do when they are under the gun.

"We had only been in pads for one week when we played Fairfield," commented Coach Graham "and don't forget, I look over the job just two weeks ago, so we've come a long way in a short space of time."

The big play of the day for the Warriors came in the third period when soph Earl Garrett, a former all-District League
football star, took a Fairfield punt on his own 45 and raced in for the score.

Graham singled out his defensive unit and in particular linebacker Jim Driscoll.

"The defense was great. They (Fairfield) were on our side of the 50 only twice all day, and Driscoll made some key plays
for us," Graham went on to say that the offense is still behind the defense. "The offense played well but we couldn't put the ball
in. We were inside their 20 yard line about 8 times and couldn't put in over." On offense Graham was impressed with the play of his quarterback Mark Collins and tight end John Mills.

The thing that pleased Graham most was the attitude of the players. "They hung together all the way," said the coach, "it was a team effort all the way." There were about 2500 Fairfield people and the temperature was in the 90's.

Sociology Major in Doubt?

The future of sociology as a major study at Boston State depends upon the students and their willingness to push for a larger department. There is, presently, talk of cutting the sociology department faculty. If this is allowed to happen, the courses for new, coming semesters will be VERY limited.
In a matter of days, the courses
for the new catalogue will be drawn up and set by the administration. Those people who are soc. majors or soc or anthro minors can be seriously affected, as well as those students who wish to take electives in these fields.

Our survey has proven that many of you are indeed concerned.

Our survey has also shown that there is an interest in social work, field work, seminars, soc.
statistics, social change and many other areas of study. To succeed, we need your support.
Rally around the sociology/anthropology club and help support the drive to keep our present number of soc/anth faculty (and preferably increase it) and to increase the number of courses of studies relevant to our times.

The sociology anthropology club meets every Wednesday at 10:30 (club hour) in room 218
Penway.

The club is open to all interested students regardless of their major.

What To Do

by Saf J. Gantnam

"A man carrying a banner
that says "Peace" in one hand
while hurling a rock or a bomb with the other is the super-hypocrite of all time."
-Pres. Richard Nixon, Oct. 31, 1970

Since Friday, October 23, 1970 Boston State has been hit
with a rash of bomb threats.
Everyday the school is telephoned and the message
keeps the Boston Police Bomb Squad coming. Everyday classes are interrupted. Last week for four days classes were called off before the third period.

We come to school to learn and everyday we fail to do this is wasted. We miss most of our classes. Tests are postponed, teachers and students alike are getting pretty fed up with this nonsense; something must be done, yet what can be done?
Will adding more guards to the security force do it? Will rewards do it? Something must be done, but what?

There are some who would defy the bomb caller by failing to leave school. They want the right to remain. Yet the Boston Police "wouldn't" allow this.
They must assume that the caller means what he says. The school must be evacuated. No chances can be taken.

The new policy of calling classes for an hour while the building is checked is a good one; it is far better than closing the school down. If you do that the bomber wins, we all lose. What do we lose? The right to an education.

Most don't take the caller seriously. When the guard

Where Has All The Money Gone?

By Arthur Lo Conte

Every semester each student at Boston State pays $12.50 in student's activity fee and this money is handled by the SGA.
Using rough figures, this total comes to approximately $187,500 per year. This, to many students at Boston State, is rather a large sum, unless of course, Howard Hughes Jr. is attending classes here. The spending of this money is in the control of the duly elected officials of the student body and they do have the best interest of the students at heart. This is obvious with the recent presentations of "The Four Bottoms," "The Irish Standstills," and "Tom Slow" whose quality need not been mentioned. The idea of questioning the spending of the students' money is unthinkable and I would certainly not be the one to do such a thing. What I do dare to suggest, is that a complete audit of all expenditures be made public to all students and to CHALKDUST for printing. Such a request cannot be too much a strain on such an able person as our treasurer, who was able to discover some profits being made by a non-profit organization. I don't want this suggestion to sound like I doubt any of SGA's dealings, but just as a means of showing to the student body the efficient way that the SGA is handling their money.

President's Message

It is a pleasure to welcome both our returning students and our many newly-enrolled students to our expanded campus, and to wish for a year of academic and personal success.

The last few years have been troubled ones on this campus, as on many others. This year assumes vital importance, not only for our college, but for American higher education. Strong forces in our society threaten the diminution or loss of the financial and moral support on which our very existence depends.

Disruption and violence have begun to erode the freedom to teach and to learn. If we allow this freedom to diminish further, we lose our claim to this support.

In this year we all must evidence the mutual respect, that mutual concern and caring which allows educational freedom to persist and flourish.

On a different note, there are good things to look for in the year ahead. We have solid reason to hope for ground-breaking for the new Tower Building in the spring;

ORGANIZATIONS

Open to all students, the clubs at Boston State provide the means for those interested in a special field or sport to relate and be part of others who feel the same way. Boston State students should be able to find a club which offers them exposure to the people or activities to which they are attuned. If not, they may form their own club, submit a constitution, and request Student Government funding. Thus, only imagination limits the number of organizational possibilities at this campus.

Asking where tears come from a woman learned of sorrow.
Asking where her child had gone
a woman learned of death.
Asking where death belongs
the woman finally learned of war.

frozen trains
lonesome lanes
snow hidden highways
where can we go?
wind whipped trees
stand shelterless
where can we hide?
empty parks
slush filled walks
vibrations freeze
within the snow.
i don't know you
in black and white.
i can't see you
in the snow.
where can we go?

May the fragrance of withered roses always be remembered as sweet.
